

I am opposed to removing restrictions on cross-ownership of media corporations. The free market only facilitates quality media through COMPETITION. Some regulations are necessary to preserve competition. Without competition to keep them in check, media corporations (owned by larger corporations in many cases) will provide only the information that serves their interests. This is a serious threat to democracy and liberty. I say this as someone who is generally a libertarian, a fiscal conservative, and a critic of government intervention in markets.